WORK ON CUBAN RECIPROCITY

SENATORS WHO OPPOSED IT MAY CHANGE FRONT.

Ouba's Fallure to Negotiate Treaty on Lines of Platt Amendment Complicates the Situation-The President's Determination to Extend Ald Unchanged. WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.-Senator Platt of Connecticut, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Relations with Cuba, who is now in Washington, will call on the Secretary of State before he leaves town to learn what progress has been made in the negotiations with the Cuban Government with regard to reciprocity.

The general fact is well known that the treaty was some time ago drawn up, but that there is a question of the rate of tariff remission to be allowed by the United States in favor of Cuba. This matter will be a subject of discussion between Senator Platt and Secretary Hay.

Mr. Platt said to-day that he had nothing to say about Cuban reciprocity, for the matter had not engaged his attention to any extent since Congress adjourned last summer, after the fruitless effort to secure legislation for the relief of Cuban commerce and industries. He declined to discuss the prospects of legislation during the coming session, but it is well known that be will immediately begin the task of assisting the President to carry out his well known policy of securing tariff concessions for Cuba along substantially the same lines as were urged during the last session. The belief of leading officials of the Administration and of influential members of the Senate is that several of those Secretors and Representatives who were most conspicuous in opposing the proposed tariff concessions last spr g will not be heard in opposition to this policy when the matter is brought up in Congress next winter.

The tariff proposition is somewhat embarassed in the minds of certain members of the Senate Cuban committee by the fact that the new republic has done absorbed. lutely nothing toward negotiating a treaty to carry into effect the terms of the so-called Platt amendment.

This law embodies the fundamental conditions upon which the Cubans were allowed by the United States to set up an independent government and the wisest men in the Administration feel that it would be an injustice, both to ourselves and to foreign nations who expect to see a stable conditio of affairs maintained in Cuba, to allow the new republic to break faith with the United States by not carrying out the terms of the Platt amendment.

Senator Platt, the author of the measure, has never expressed his cpb ion in regard to the failure of the Cubans to take the initia-tive in negotiating a treaty, but the views of other members of the Senate Committee on Cuba are well known.

It has been understood for some time that Senator Spooner and others of the committee have little faith that the Cuban Government intended to comply with the conditions laid down by the Platt amendment. Moreover, some of them believe that Cuba never will take steps to carry out this chiest. Some of them have fall out this object. Some of them have felt that the United States ought not to grant trade concessions to Cuba until the Government at Havana shall make some move the United States shall have received some pretty positive assurances that Cuba in tends to do this.

It is probable that the Administration will not allow (ubas failure to act in re-gard to the Platt amendment to interfere with the effort to secure the ratification of a reciprocity treaty.

President Receivelt was not at all discouraged by the failure of Congress at the last session to grant the desired re-lief, and he will make a strong recommendation on the subject in his annual message to Congress next month Immediately after the adjournment of the last session he made a speech at Pittsburg in which he declared most emphatically that favor-able trade concessions would be made for Cuba's benefit, and he is fully determined that his policy shall be carried out this

HOW IT'S BURNED UP. Her Husband Never Pays for $115 Gowns -840 or $50 is His Limit-The Tailor

Sues the Wife and Says the Gown Was a Fit Unless Her Figure Changed. A sealed verdict will be opened this morning by Justice Leventritt in the sult of Joseph Durand, a ladies' tailor with an establishment at Madison avenue and Fiftyeighth street, against Mrs. Carrie D. Bryan, wife of Dr. Walter Bryan, of 215 St. John's place, Brooklyn, for $150, as the price of a gown she ordered from Durand in March, misfit by Mrs. Bryan; Durand called it a perfect fit. The jury had to decide beween their respective words, as the gown was burnt five months after it was made in a fire at the Bryan's home in Sterling

The testimony was conflicting The only undisputed facts were that the gown, which was of the variety known to femininity as "strapped," was ordered made and deivered; that it remained in the possession f M s. Bryan until it was burned, and that it was never paid for. Dr. Bryan says that he wrote to Durand saying that the gown was a misfit and "please, come and take it away." Durand swears he never got that letter, which was also said to contain a propocition to the effect that Mrs. Bryan would take the skirt for $55 but would not accept the jacket, as it was too small in the bust and waist.

There was another disputed questionwho should pay for the gown? Durand and Miss Davidson, his bookkeeper, swore that Mrs. Bryan, when ordering the gown, had declared that she would pay for the gown herself, as her husband never paid her dress bills. Miss Davidson declared that Mrs. Bryan added that Dr. Bryan was "not worth two cents" and couldn't afford to pay her bills.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Bryan denied this.

hough they admitted that it was not the loctor's custom to pay his wife's "extrava-gant" bills. Dr. Bryan said that his wife had to pay for all her own candy, expensive hats and similar feminine luxuries. He held himself responsible for her necessiheld himself responsible for her necessi-ties only. A $115 gown was not a necessity, he considered $40 or $50 enough; but he would have paid Durand's bill if he had thought it a just debt. Durand was asked if he had ever sent Mrs. Bryan a bill for the gown. "Plenty of them," he answered, "and lawyer's letters, too. But I never got an answer, nor did she ever tell me the gown didn't fit," He said it fitted perfectly when it left his shop unless Mrs. Bryan's figure had changed between that date and her last visit. The gown had been altered several times, a gown had been altered several times, a whole month being spent on it.

"What do you mean by her figure chang-ing?" he was asked by Mrs. Bryan's lawyer.

"Well, maybe she got stouter, or maybe thinner."
"Well, did she?"

"How should I know? Maybe she did. I often find ladies change that way," re-marked Durand, smilingly. "Sometimes its only a change in their corsets, or some Lawyer Patterson was summing

While Lawyer Patterson was summing up for Durand he remarked to the jury:

"The evidence shows that Dr. Bryan cannot pay the bill, and——"

"I can," came from Bryan in an indignant shout. He had jumped menacingly from his seat, but a court officer calmed him down. Patterson continued quietly. "If down. Patterson continued quietly. If he can, let him do it. He can't pay, and his wife won't. Between the two of them Durand is being whipsawed out of his
